University of East London

INTRODUCTION

Huge congratulations on completing your studies at the University of East London! Although your time here is over, we want your relationship with us to continue.

As a UEL graduate, you are now part of our UEL Alumni Network, which comprises graduates from all over the world. You can call on this vibrant community to open up new opportunities and to help you grow as an individual.

As a University we've been pioneering futures since 1898. As we enter the age of the 4th industrial revolution, we have re-committed ourselves, through Vision 2028, to ensure we are the careers-led university by creating more pathways to sustainable careers in a changing world, working in collaboration with industry and our alumni network and by taking meaningful steps to increase diversity and inclusion in the workplace.

We want you to stay involved with us not only so we can support you on your own journey but also so we can call upon your input, influence and life experiences to drive our mission forward for the generations to come.

That's why the University is here to help, even though you have completed your studies. From offering vital employment skills, to empowering you to set up your own business, we want you to call on us for support.

The Alumni team will keep you in the loop with regular newsletters and magazines as well as invitations to networking and social events. We will connect you to people within the university who are best placed to provide you with the tailored help and support you need.

This guide has been designed to give you an overview of the range of services you can expect after you graduate, as well as introducing you to the teams that will help you on your way. RANDSTAD

Kick-start your career with Randstad, the world's No.1 recruiter.

Randstad is working with the University of East London, helping students and graduates to gain the support they need to find employment, both while at university and beyond.

Getting you to where you want to be

So you have your degree in hand and the world is your oyster. However, you're now – perhaps for the first time ever – in a situation where your next step isn't clearly mapped out for you. With a number of avenues and possibilities, sometimes it's tricky to know which way to turn or what to do next. We're here for you every step of the way, from helping you create that killer CV, tips and advice when it comes to combating those pre interview nerves and ultimately, getting your foot in the door of the company you wish to work for. With almost 6,000 live vacancies right now, what are you waiting for!

ONLINE PROFILE

An increasingly popular avenue of search for prospective employers and recruiters alike is your online presence. Some may perform a head search in order to seek out a perfectly matched candidate, whilst others use the likes of social media as a 'safety net' to check your background before inviting you to the next stage of the recruitment process. Your online presence typically comprises your LinkedIn profile, Facebook, Twitter and online profiles for individual job boards, discussion boards, blogs and more. At the simplest level, if you have photographs or information on your social profiles you'd rather a future employer didn't have access to, check your privacy settings and consider deleting the worst offenders. Ensure information stated on LinkedIn matches your CV and is current, up to date and reflects your job seeking circumstances. Building a solid network on LinkedIn can also improve your visibility and gain you access to key decision makers or names within your industry; joining interest groups relating to those specific organisations or their markets can also form a small yet significant part of your online footprint. Don't be afraid to engage with peers and get your name out there; if you have a blog that could strengthen your application, it's worth shouting about this too. Just keep it clean and relevant where possible.

Contact your dedicated team at Randstad who are on hand to give you tailored support as and when you need it.
